The 2018 Tidewater Distinguished Merit Award Recipient

Eggleston –

For 62 years, Eggleston has provided education, training and employment for persons with disabilities. First conceived in 1955 by a group of parents who wanted to find meaningful daytime activities for their adult children with intellectual disabilities, the organization has grown to assist individuals with disabilities to gain independence, confidence, and increased feelings of self-worth through on-the-job training and stable, rewarding work opportunities. Originally known as the Tidewater Vocational Center, the organization served eight individuals at its start. Today, hundreds receive support through 33 programs and 22 locations. Eggleston continues to grow their services through partnerships with businesses and government institutions, offering participants the chance to earn a living and lead full and independent lives, benefiting participants at home, at work, and at play.

Fifty-four years ago, the Virginia Center for Inclusive Communities - then called the National Conference of Christians and Jews - began a tradition in South Hampton Roads, "to honor the work of our friends, neighbors, and family members who gave to others the same rights, respect and dignity that they sought for themselves." Today, VCIC works with schools, businesses, and communities to achieve success through inclusion. The 83-year-old organization delivers programs to high school students in the region through the Connections Institute and Diversity Dialogue Day. VCIC also provides professional development for many local educators, businesses, and nonprofit organizations, leveraging diversity and inclusion to achieve success.

The 2018 VCIC Tidewater Humanitarian Awards dinner is being chaired by Dr. Scott D. Miller, President of Virginia Wesleyan University. For more information about the organization or about reservations for the Awards on March 22nd, go to www.inclusiveVA.org.
